COMMENTS.

Our Fulham friends may not view with the same pleasure as we do the game this afternoon, but we feel sure they will appreciate the welcome, which is as hearty as we give to any club. It is many years since their first team visited us—20 years, we believe, for they went into the Second Division in 1907-8, and only fell out of it last season.

They probably have a much better side than last season, and must be regarded as quite as formidable candidates for promotion as we are, and if we finish on top of the League this season, we hope they will soon follow us into the Second Division. If they go up before us, well, we shall hope to join them the season after.

We know that our supporters will give a cordial welcome to the Craven Cottagers, and hope for a good game, just as much as we hope to be the winners.

The injury to Barrett on Saturday has necessitated a change in the Fulham rearguard, and Bird returns to the left-back position, while McNab, who is the usual centre-half, is to lead the attack in place of Avery.

At the moment of writing we do not anticipate any change in our team, though there are many things to be considered this (Wednesday) morning, for the ground is heavy, and must be considered.

Our boys will be in their usual, Fulham will wear amber coloured jerseys.

On Saturday Next.

We visit Fulham again on Saturday for a League game, and the players of the clubs will soon be able to dispense with formal introductions to each other.

At Luton there will be a good game staged, for Leicester City Reserves are our visitors in a London Combination game. We hope to introduce another new player who is highly recommended, but in any circumstances we trust to field a

"VERDUN."

That epoch-making film, "Verdun," is the attraction for the second half of the week, and there is no doubt that large houses will be attracted. The producer, Leon Poirier, a noted French playwright, was himself decorated for gallantry at Verdun, and he has given the film an air of absolute realism. His search for this or that article was indefatigable. Even his selection of types to represent the symbolic human figures in the picture was meticulous and unusual.

WELLINGTON.

"THE VALLEY OF THE GIANTS."

Readers of Peter B. Kyne's novel of love, thrills and fights in the timber country, "The Valley of the Giants," will have the opportunity of seeing the screen version during the latter part of the week. The original story is faithfully adhered to, and Milton Sills is well cast as Bryce Cardigan, the son of a pioneer lumber magnate. The leading feminine role is taken by Doris Kenyon, whose film appearances have of late been rather infrequent.

PALACE.

"HOME, JAMES."

Laura La Plante has never had a better vehicle for the display of her pantomimic talent than "Home, James." Laughs are the order of the evening at the Palace Theatre, and as a cure for the blues, "Home, James" can be heartily recommended. The story is of a girl who leaves her home town to make a name for herself as an artist, and ends up behind a store counter.

"MOCKERY."

Strange shadows of terror, vivid portrayals of the struggle that rent asunder a great nation, and eerie characters from a world unknown to the rest of the nations of the earth, are the background for Lon Chaney's strangest role in his new Metro-Golden-Mayer film, "Mockery," the feature for to-night and the rest of the week. Chaney is cast as a Russian peasant, a strange half-animal of the lower classes. He plays it with a remarkable artistry.

EMPIRE.

"SERENADE" & "WIFE SAVERS."

The age-old question of whether art and marriage can be reconciled is dealt with in "Serenade," featuring Adolphe Menjou, in the second half of the week, as a young Viennese musician. As soldiers, sailors and aviators, Wallace Beery and Raymond Hatton were a laugh. As Swiss vodellers, in "Wife Savers," they are said to be a scream, as mountain climbers a riot, and as duellists nothing short of a panic. It is an hilarious farce, and as charming a bit of nonsense as was ever screened.

HIGH TOWN.

"MILITARY MAIDS."

"Military Maids," showing for the latter part of the week, illustrates the troubles and trials of an entertainer's life behind the trenches in France. Imagine having to tramp miles from the rail-head, carrying a load of luggage, and then finding you are to be billeted in a cow-shed, which is not even cleaned out! That's part of what Vera Reynolds and Julia Faye have to endure in this dramatic and thrilling war film.
